Life is hard when you're a girl. It's so unfair and so unfair it's really, really, unfair. When you're a boy, you know that life is hard, but you also know that one day you'll get it right. When you're a girl, you know that life is hard, but you know that there will come a day when it won't. Because this is just life. "You don't know me!" you say, this is just life. "What do you mean?" they say, this is just life. "Just because you don't know me doesn't mean I can't know you." "I know you," they say, "I know you very, very well." "Fine," you say, "so I know you, but what do I know about you?" "You don't know me, I don't know you, that means you have nothing to be afraid of," they say. "Yes I do," you say, "I know that you have a big heart, and you're kind and you're gentle and you love your sister and your family, and your teachers, and your friends, and your dog, and I know that you love school." "You don't know me," they say, "You don't know me," "I know you very, very well." "Fine," you say, "you're so very confusing." If you're a girl, you have a few options, but all three are equally unsatisfactory. You can hope for your life to change and change it, or you can hope for your life to change and be disappointed, or you can go into battle for your life and change it, and either way you change it. If you're a boy, you just have to be strong and go into battle for your
