Q: Issue with vector interface I am new to Sieve of Eratosthenes. I tried implementing the following code:

#include <vector>
#include <string>
using namespace std;
void sieve(unsigned int n) {
    std::vector<bool> vec(n, true);
    if (n % 2 == 0) // if odd number is divisible by 2 vec.push_back(false); //add number to vector and set the value false for (auto it = vec.rbegin(); it != vec.rend(); it++) // iterate through all elements in the vector if (*it) // check if all elements in vector are true vec.erase(it); //erase from vector and set value false while (vec.size() > n) //check if the vector is not empty till n is greater std::cout << " ";
    std::cout << "\n";
int main() {
    sieve(10);

#include <vector> void sieve(unsigned int n) { std::vector vec; if (n % 2 == 0) // if odd number is divisible by 2 { vec.push_back(true); //add number to vector and set the value true } else { for (auto it = vec.rbegin(); it!= vec.rend(); it++) // iterate through all elements in the vector if (*it) // check if all elements in vector are true vec.erase(it); //erase from vector and set value false } while (vec.size() > n) //check if the vector is not empty till n is greater std::cout > n; std::cout #include <vector> void sieve(unsigned int n) { std::vector vec; // you are declaring a new vector object instead of using the // object of vector passed as argument to sieve() function if (n % 2 == 0
