Elden Ring PC/Windows [Updated]

I really want to like this game. The story and setting is fantastic and the world looks beautiful in motion. However, the gameplay features that were shared on the website I visited are not enough. I find that I am unable to invest any real emotion in this game. There is no real progression system, meaning there is no sense of accomplishment or achievement, no replayability. There is no experience gain system. There is no leveling, no ability to customize your character like in other games like Dark Souls. Basically this means that there is no game. That isn't to say there isn't a story. The story is fairly interesting, but because it is offered in "aspect-of-a-story-format", it doesn't give the player enough information to comprehend it. I am spending equal time trying to figure out the rules and what exactly is happening, what world this is, and what is going on. That might all be because I am an incredibly slow, inflexible and uncoordinated player, but it still leaves me somewhat dissatisfied. The action is intriguing, but I am constantly hampered by the lack of detail. I am expected to figure it out for myself with frequent loading screens, and I simply do not have the time or ability to do so. I will admit that the lack of detail is the main issue, however the other gameplay elements, coupled with the gameplay presentation itself, do not provide any sense of satisfaction. I am looking forward to your review, since it looks like you are a writer and I am not, but I am still cautious of the game as it stands. I hope there will be a patch and that the game will be as polished and beautiful as it looks in motion. I don't think it will be, but it does look like I will be playing this with headphones. Early Access Review: Elden Ring Gameplay: "Stone-Plague on a Sterling Cloth" by Adrien Maisonneuve The cycle of life has always been portrayed through different cultural and religious perspectives, ranging from the immortality the Sumerians believed in, to the end of life predicted by Christianity's "Second Coming". This is one of the most human parts of nature that transcends the traditional classification of animal, vegetable and mineral; it seems to be a part of the most basic elements of our existence that can't be explained or bff6bb2d33
